They want to spring his frame, Leon Bruner is visiting his friends at puncture his tire and give him a header at the next election. They know that some paths will be built somewhere according to somobody's ideas and they also have good reason to believe that only about 25 cents of the per capita tax will go for path and that the remaining 75 cents will go to a warmer place than that in which it was coined.

If the present controversy between the editors of the Woodburn Independent and the Oregonian continues, we shall expect to hear of the former calling an "International Moral Sussion Congress." He undoubtedly knows just how to successfully manage one, but like Czar Nicholas, he is not consistent. The wily Czar plans for disarmament on one hand and strengthens his military power on the other. The Woodburn editor writes Sercely in one column against corporal unishment in schools and in another column endorses the course pursued by our authorities in the Philippines. The Fillipinos in mind power are nothing more than children, therefore let Gen. Otis cease doing anything that may wound the finer sensibilities of those "half child, half devil" people. They may not remember him kindly in after life; they may trace their downfall to the corercive measures he has employed; he has no meral right to hold them in check because they have done and continue to do wrong. Give them sugar-coated moral sussion and they will lay down their arms.

Where a large number of children are daily congregated, there are always some restless, mischievous spirits that evening and a general good time is exmust be held in check. No one for a pected. moment holds that they should be punished in an unduly severe manner and no one that knows anything about teach- Holmes' Business College all winter, ing beyond its theory will say that coercive measures should never be employed. Why punish mature offenders? Let the highest on roll. the executive officers make careful study of each offender brought before him and direct him in the paths of uprightness by using kind words instead of cruelly sending him off to prison. Such proceedure would meet with the approval of the Woodburn press and a few other theorizing people.

CANBY.

Joseph Graham is having the interior spring. of his confectionary store tastefully decorated by a new coat of paint.

Several of the members of Canby's passers by saw five youths sitting astride caps holding a wheel with one hand and grasping the bridge with the other. The constant rate of travel between Canby and points south and the danger of crossing such a long trestle, especially so to women and children, should lead the county commissioners to gratify a long felt want by extending the county road, with a suitable bridge just below the railroad trestle.

A movement is on foot to build a bicycle path around by the camp ground and also out the county road as far as F. A. Sleight's residence. This is a good movement, one which would not only number of pedestrians, who would use the path at all times of the year.

We have noticed with interest the exchange of opinions between the Oregonian and Woodbarn Independent relating to the subject of corporal punishment in schools. With all deference and respect for the opinions of two such leading editors as Gill and Scott, yet we connot wholly agree with either. Gill cites the schools of the East in comparison with the schools of Woodburn. There is no comparison owing to the different environments, and although in all cases it is best to govern without recourse to whip, yet sometimes pupils come from homes where truthfulness, honor and obedience are held lightly. Mr. M. caught while tront fishing a few The teacher is not aided by the parents and often is condemned in the presence Your correspondent was out hunting of children. Such a course will naturally cause insubordination and defiance. Such cases, past power of sussion, must be checked or their influence will tend to undertermine the teachers influence with other pupils. There are two ways, for the latter, as expulsion leaves a blot seems to cause more trouble at the time, will eventually prove the better.
