So say a kind word when you can.

Oh! say a kind word, then whenever
It will make a heart cheerful and glad,
But chiefly—forget it, oh. never!—
To the one that is hopeless and sad,
For there is no word so easy in saying;
So begin—if you havn't began—
And never in life be delaying
To say a kind word when you can.

Americans at the Court of England.

The London Times, of June 12, says :- The Hon. Millard Fillmore, late President of the United States, and suite, have arrived in town, and taken apartmentant Fenton's Hotel, St. Jas. The Hon. Martin Van Buren and Colonel Van Buren have arrived at Long's Hotel New Bond street, from the United States.

The following presentations to Queen Victoria took place at her Majesty's drawing room June 14:-By the Countes of Clarenden-Mrs.

Abbott Lawrence.

By the United States, Minister-Abbott Lawrence, Esq. son of the late Minister to this court; and Henry E. Davies, Esq., Private Secretary to the Hon. Millard Fillmore.

In the diplomatic circle were, at the same time, Mr. Buchanan, United States Minister; Colonal Lawrence Attache to the Legation; and the Hon. Millard Fillmore late President of the United States.

Her Majesty's dinner party in the evening included her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, their Serene Highnesses the Princess of Hohenlohe, and the Princes Adelaide of Hohenlohe, the Lord Chancellor and Lady Anna Maria Dawson, the Baroness de Speth Lord Broughton, Sir Francis and Lady Arabella Baring, Maj. General Wylde, Colonel Luke, (Royal Horse Artillery, and Mr. Van Buren, ex-President of the United States.

The London Court Journal of June

15 has the following items:The Queen held a court at three o'clock this afternoon at Buckingham Palace. The Hon. Millard Fillmore, late President of the United States, was presented to her Majesty, at an audience, by the Earl of Clarendon, he Queen's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. [From the Court Journal June 15.] political wire-workers to opinion is, that it depends the United States at our court, is an regulations of the poles. event which deserves a passing note. Mr. Fillmore looks even a yonger man is there any appearance of baldness. He seems apparently about fifty-eight, is smaller in stature than the minister, but with as handsome and intellectual a countenance. It is amusing to see the sang froid with which the former chief of this powerful government is treated by the officers of one of his successors. The republican principle in this matter is no fiction, and the ex-President has really and actually become nothing more than an American citizen. Mr. Fillmore has, however, been recieved with much consideration at Court and with great distinction by the ministers. At the brilliant assem blies of Viacountess Palmerston and the Countess of Clarendon there is no doubt the ex-President will be the personage of the day.

When presented to Her Majesty Mr. Fillmore wore a plain full dress suit.

PATHETIC .-- A fast young man, returning elated from an evening's carouse, had reached the corner of Norfolk-street, in the Strand, when, looming through the miet, he spied a portly figure shivering in the cold. He clasped the lone damsel in his arms, kissing her smooth icy face, and sympa-thisingly inquired why she ventured out 'without her bonnet?' An observant policeman saw him bugging the round headed cast-iron "pillar post" erected there the previous morning.

There is no selfishness where there is wife and family. There the house is lighted up by mutual charitles; everything achieved for them is a victory; everything endured is a triumph. How many vices are suppressed that there may be no bad example! How many exertions made to recommend and inculoste a good one!
