JOHN R. BRADLEY, WHO BACKED COOK AND HIS ARCTIC SHIP.

John R. Bradley, who backed the Cook polar expedition, has checks and other papers to show that he expended less than $50,000 in fitting out the exploration party. When Bradley was preparing for a hunting trip to the arctic with Cook the latter laid before him the plan he had long had in his mind as to the best way to reach the pole. The idea struck Bradley, who is an ardent sportsman, as being an excellent one, and he consented to furnish the necessary backing. He says he will ask no share of the explorer's profits from the achievement.
